Expenses Overview – Enhanced Efficiencies

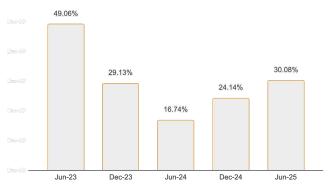

Overview of Expenses (N'Bn)

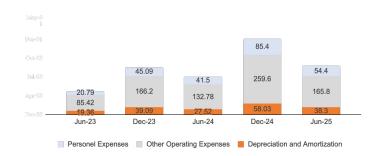

Expense Drivers

- Increased operating cost in Nigeria, West and East African regions due to sustained inflationary pressures and impact of reforms which offset gains from translation of subsidiary OPEX to Naira on the back of exchange rate stability.
- Deposit and Total Asset growth also caused marked increase in regulatory cost.
- The 42.5% growth in interest expense was driven by volume expansion and increase in cost of funds (CoF) from 1.54% in H1-2024 to 2.17% in H1-2025.
- Strong revenue growth put cost to income ratio at 30.1%.

OPEX Drivers

The Group recorded a 28.1% growth in OPEX from ₩201.8bn in H1-2024 to ₩258.5bn in H1-2025 with non-controllable cost mix increasing to 25.7% of the total operating expenses in H1-2025 from 24.4% in H1-2024. The key Opex growth drivers are as follows:

a. Increase in regulatory charges - AMCON levy and Deposit Insurance Premium. AMCON levy increased by 38.7% (\$50.9\text{bn} vs \$36.7\text{bn}) due to growth in Total Asset and Contingents base (\$10.17\text{tn} vs \$7.33\text{tn}). Also, Deposit insurance premium increased by 25.0% (\$15.7\text{bn} vs \$12.7\text{bn}) due to a 17.8% increase in underlying Customers' deposit volume (\$6.19\text{tn} vs \$5.26\text{tn}).

b. 22.3% growth in occupancy costs and repairs & maintenance (\$18.0\text{bn}\), driven by lagged impact of exchange rate and increase in price occasioned by rise in diesel, fuel, and general maintenance costs as well ground and water rates.

C. 3.2% growth in technological and service-related expenses to $37.8bn in H1-2025 vs $36.6bn in H1-2024, this is in line with the Group's growth aspirations, necessitating increased spend on technology. The growth was mild due to stronger Naira/US$ conversion which positively impacted the translation of subsidiaries' OPEX balances.

d. 31.1% growth in personnel expenses (\$54.4 vs \$41.5bn) resulted from the full weight impact in H1-2025 of the increase in salaries of core and non-core employees done in FY-2024 to cushion the impact of rising cost of living for employees across the Group's banking and non-banking entities.

Global Currency Review

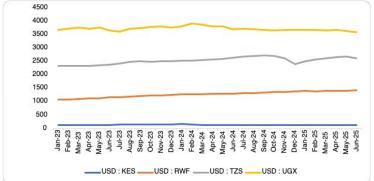

In the first half of 2025, the U.S. dollar slumped 10%-11% on the U.S. dollar index (DXY) its worst half year performance since 1973, while the Euro gained 12%-13% against the dollar. Emerging market currencies generally benefited from the weaker USD. In Africa, moves were mixed; the Ghanaian cedi was a standout gainer while the Nigerian naira showed marked resilience through H1, averaging \frac{1540}{5}$ in January, easing to \frac{1610}{5}$ in April, and strengthening to around \frac{1538}{5}$ by end-June, signaling a steadier, more sustainable path. China's yuan was comparatively steady, with authorities anchoring the currency; it firmed modestly in late H1 by 1.5% against the dollar.

Global Interest Rates and Inflation Highlights

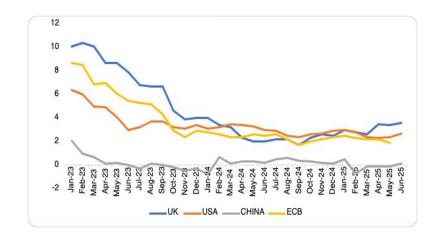

Interest Rate

Central banks maintained a cautious approach to monetary easing in the first half of 2025 as inflationary pressures moderated unevenly across regions. The Federal Reserve delivered its first rate cut of the year in September, reducing rates by 25 basis pozints and signaling further reductions ahead. The European Central Bank paused its measured easing cycle mid-year, having already lowered rates earlier, as inflation aligned with its medium-term 2% target. The Bank of England, however, kept policy rates unchanged, citing the need for vigilance despite signs of cooling price pressures.

Inflation Rate

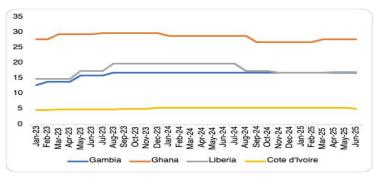

Inflation moderated in both the U.S. and the Eurozone, with the latter moving closer to the European Central Bank's target following a notable dip in the spring. In the U.S., price pressures eased but remained shaped by rising service sector costs and trade-related factors, keeping the Federal Reserve cautious in its policy stance. The UK, however, continued to grapple with persistent price pressures, prompting the Bank of England to hold rates steady while emphasizing vigilance. In China, consumer prices stayed subdued, reflecting weak household demand despite sustained fiscal support measures aimed at stimulating growth.

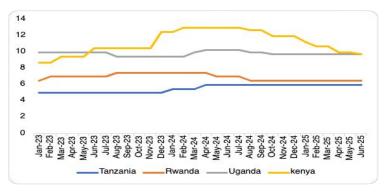

Sub-Saharan Africa Interest Rates and Inflation Highlights

Interest Rate

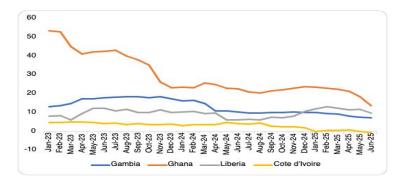

Sub-Saharan Africa's central banks started shifting away from extreme tightening as inflation trended downward albeit cautiously and unevenly. Economies with relatively better inflation metrics e.g., South Africa, Kenya initiated meaningful easing, while others like Nigeria and Ghana tread more deliberately. High-rate countries facing acute macroeconomic stress remain cautious.

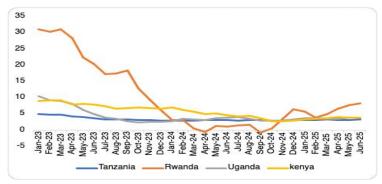

Inflation Rate

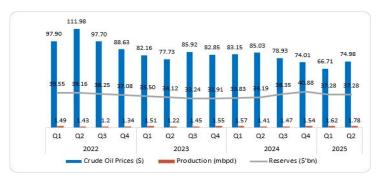

Inflation remained elevated across many African economies, driven primarily by currency depreciation, high import costs, and lingering food price pressures. While headline inflation is still above target in several markets, a gradual softening trend suggests scope for more accommodative monetary policy in the months ahead.

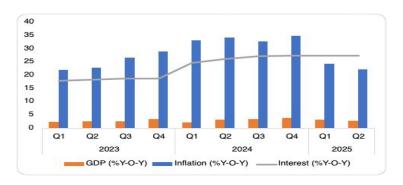

Nigeria Macroeconomic Review

Lower oil prices and flat production weighed on Nigeria's reserves in H1 2025, which declined by about $3.7 billion to $37.2 billion. Bonny Light crude averaged $67–$75 per barrel, while oil output fluctuated between 1.51 mbpd (ex-condensates) and 1.74 mbpd, underscoring persistent structural challenges.

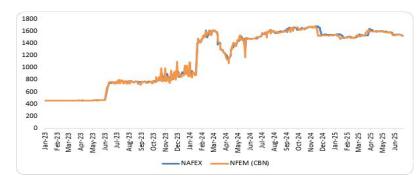

Nigeria's headline inflation moderated to 22.2% in June from 24.8% in January, supported by a slight easing in food prices. Economic activity remained resilient, with Q1 GDP expanding 3.13% year-on-year, albeit below prior expectations. The Central Bank held the Monetary Policy Rate at 27.50%, signaling a cautious approach to sustaining disinflationary gains.

Average yield on Nigerian Treasury Bills fell 66bps to 20.25% in Q2 2025, reflecting the Apex Bank's policy stance and improved liquidity. For H1 2025, yields eased modestly, with short-to mid-tenors softening while longer-dated bills held steady on expectations of sustained monetary tightening.

The naira showed resilience, averaging about ₩1,540/$ in January, briefly adjusting to ₩1,610/$ in April, and firming around ₩1,538/$ by end-June, reflecting a more stable outlook and traction towards rate convergence.

Nigerian Financial Services Regulatory Environment Overview

Policy consistency, improved transparency and ongoing structural reforms continued to strengthen investors' confidence and support various businesses

World Economy Outlook

Global

Global growth is projected at 3.0% in 2025, a slight upward revision, supported by front-loaded activity ahead of tariffs, easier financial conditions, a weaker dollar, and fiscal support in key markets. Still, growth remains below the pre-COVID average of ~3.7%, with only a modest pickup to 3.1% expected in 2026.

Headline inflation is forecast to ease from 4.2% in 2025 to 3.6% in 2026, though the path is uneven—advanced economies, particularly the U.S., face a slower decline in price pressures, while other regions are expected to benefit from more favorable dynamics

Sub-Saharan Africa

Sub-Saharan Africa's economy is projected to grow 4.0% in 2025, a modest upgrade driven by a softer U.S. dollar and easing trade pressures that are helping reduce debt burdens and improve external financing.

The outlook remains resilient but tempered by tighter global financial conditions, commodity price volatility, and constrained access to external funding.

West Africa

West Africa's economies show resilience amid persistent headwinds. The African Development Bank projects regional GDP growth of 4.6%, led by Côte d'Ivoire at ~6.3% on the back of strong investment and infrastructure spending. Nigeria remains central to regional performance, with monetary easing aimed at supporting growth while sustaining disinflation efforts. Ghana has also made measurable progress, with inflation easing steadily in recent months.

Still, challenges remain: commodity price swings, limited fiscal space, and external financing pressures continue to weigh on the outlook.

East Africa

East Africa continues to outpace many Sub-Saharan peers in early 2025. Ethiopia is targeting growth of 8.9% in FY 2025/26 backed by IMF-supported reforms and easing inflation. Kenya is projected to grow ~5.3%, driven by gains in agriculture, tourism, technology, and mounting capital inflows, and is forecast to become the region's largest economy. Tanzania's economy is expanding near 6%, powered by infrastructure and energy projects.
